Hugo Linns grew up listening to the unique melodies of Brazil's Northeast. He began his musical training at the Pernambuco Conservatory of Music and later enrolled in the Music Education program at the Federal University of Pernambuco (UFPE), where he deepened his musical knowledge and worked as a researcher in ethnomusicology funded by CNPq (Brazil's National Council for Scientific and Technological Development). He has participated in national and international cultural activities, working professionally as a musician, actor, arranger, composer, musical director, and producer.

Besides his five solo albums on the “viola dinâmica” (Northeastern Brazilian viola: ten-string guitar), he has worked with other artists such as Renata Rosa, Maciel Salu, Fadas Madrinhas, Riah, Juliano Holanda, Alessandra Leão, Geraldo Maia, Guilherme Kastrup, Marcelo Cabral, Guizado, Marcelo Jeneci, Arnaldo Antunes, Kátia B., Lurdez da Luz, Adelmo Arcoverde, Lo Cor de la Plana, Emily Loizou, and Sebastien Notini, among others.

He has been on international tours across Europe, South America, and Africa, where he performed at major festivals such as WOMEX, Europalia, and the Sziget Festival.

He is currently part of the cast and also serves as assistant musical director of the production "Isso Aqui Tá Bom Demais" (translated as "This Is Just Too Good"), which portrays the life of the exceptional musician Dominginhos.
